Andrew M. Cislo, Ph.D. is a Research Associate/Investigator at the Cecil G. Sheps Center for Health Services Research at the University of North Carolina - Chapel Hill. Dr. Cislo is a medical sociologist with broad interests in Latina/o immigrants and immigration, social psychology, and psychiatric epidemiology. His current research focuses on race/ethnic disparities in health services among people with severe mental illness who have been involved in the criminal justice system.