David Chambers, D.Phil.

Dr. David Chambers is Chief of the Services Research and Clinical Epidemiology Branch (SRCEB) of the Division of Services and Intervention Research at the National Institute of Mental Health. He arrived at NIMH in 2001, brought to the Institute to run the Dissemination and Implementation Research Program within SRCEB, where he continues to manage a portfolio of grants that study the integration of scientific findings and effective clinical practices in mental health within real-world service settings.

Since 2006, David has also served as Associate Director for Dissemination and Implementation Research, leading NIH initiatives around the coordination of dissemination and implementation research in health, and has served as Institute representative to the Federal Action Agenda Senior Partners Workgroup, which directs the Federal response to the President’s Freedom Commission Report on Mental Health. Prior to his arrival at NIMH, David worked as a member of a research team at Oxford University, where he studied national efforts to implement evidence-based practice within healthcare systems.
