Whitney L. Duncan is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Anthropology at the University of California-San Diego. She is currently conducting her dissertation fieldwork in Oaxaca, Mexico, on the impact of migration and the growth of mental health services on Oaxacans’ conceptions, experiences, and treatments of emotional distress. Her previous research has focused the effects of migration on health in the indigenous Mixteca region of Oaxaca and among Mixtecos in San Diego.